

BOAT

International

US EDITION

GLASS ACT

WORLD EXCLUSIVE: Barbara, the 290ft Oceanco that takes glazing to another level

IS IT WORTH BUYING A BERTH?

Plus: captains confess and the hot new hideouts
in our marina special

SX APPEAL

On board Sanlorenzo's radical new cruiser

THE RIGHT COURSE

How to indulge your passions for golf and yachting – at the same time

Star light

Architect and designer David Nosanchuck has made waves at the Salon Art + Design in New York City with the launch of his light fixture, Butterfly Asteroid. With it, Nosanchuck joins a cadre of talented New York designers who see lighting as more than functional, akin to illuminated sculpture. Butterfly Asteroid comes as a pendant or table light and models the meeting of the Itokawa asteroid and the limenitis arthemis butterfly. Nosanchuk points out their unexpected similarities: the ability to fly as a result of metamorphosis, and predictable flight patterns based on defined orbits and annual migrations, respectively. While the butterfly wings are made of beech wood, 3D printing and laser engraving achieve their translucency. Nosanchuk revels in combining classical craft with contemporary innovation. “While the new era of design gives the author more artistic license,” he says, “it is the makers that define the ultimate craft, with both a knowledge of new machinery and production as well as traditional making methods passed over generations.” POA, hostlerburrows.com

> WHAT A RACKET
Today's tennis gear is generally a far cry from the formality of yesteryear's all-white dress code. To restore a little vintage charm to the game, Parker Thatch has introduced a cotton canvas racket carrier. Roomy enough for two rackets, it can be monogrammed and comes with bold racing stripes. $325 parkerthatch.com

^ HIDING AWAY
Sol y Luna is known for its tailored leather-sheathed accessories. Using wood and leather from the Chaco region of Argentina and Paraguay, the artisans offer on-the-go goods, from thermoses (pictured) to coolers, gardening tools and picnic cases, along with furniture. $140, moncxiii.com

Let's get physical

When it comes to onboard exercise, sporty doesn't have to mean plain boring, finds Mieke ten Have

> RUB DOWN
John Robshaw, best known for his ebullient Indian textiles, riffs on a traditional Thai ikat for his Dita Lotus beach towel. The designer has played with scale, color and orientation to refresh and update the classic pattern and frames the graphic design with horizontal stripes. $85, johnrobshaw.com

FOR MORE INTERIORS INSPIRATION
boatint.com/interiors

^ POLKA PLAYER
Hermès' all-cotton terry cloth Yachting Dots beach pillow has a playful Art Deco polka dot pattern. The durable cushion provides ideal rest between waterborne adventures and comes in two vibrant colorways. $230, hermes.com

> SURFING AFRICA
San Francisco-based textile store St Frank has garnered a reputation for sourcing indigenous textiles like shibori and kuba cloth and elegantly framing them in Lucite boxes. Partnering with surfer and fine surfboard maker Gary Linden, St Frank has released a collection of surfboards in kuba cloth, West African indigo and mud cloth patterns. From $1,295, stfrank.com

WARDROBE ESSENTIAL

Slopes & stripes

Founded in Grenoble, France, in 1952, Moncler manages to blur the lines between high-performance sportswear and high fashion. Now based in Italy under the direction of CEO Remo Ruffini, its ski-focused Grenoble collection was a highlight of the autumn catwalks during New York Fashion Week.

This sweater, featuring bold geometric stripes in an insulating, breathable wool blend, is at home both on the slopes and in the city. Grenoble crew neck sweater, $560, store.moncler.com

PHOTOGRAPHY
Josh Hight

STYLING
Sam Smith

Stratispheric

Scott Group Studio specializes in yacht and private jet interiors. Its new “Stratis” carpet collection is inspired by patterns and textures found in nature. Made in Michigan, using only natural fibers, it features wool, cashmere and silk woven into subtle graphic designs. Bespoke carpets and rugs are available. POA, scottgroupstudio.com

