ART IN DESIGN

Striated with bands of sunny gold and warm rust, Agata is one of six landscape-inspired carpets in the Escala collection by Scott Group Studio. Playing with scale, natural hues, and contrasting silk sheen and matte wool, the collection "adds color and warmth into a neutral environment without being disruptive," says brand product director Jennifer Kirchgessner. Thanks to the brand's in-house design studio and Michigan factory, it's a starting point for designers' own custom creations. scottgroupstudio.com

Asthetique Atelier's Swans wallcovering evokes the Ballets Russes and elegance "gone but not lost," says Julien Albertini, who co-founded the New York studio with Alina Pimkina. Designed as a bold interior accent, Swans is available in smoky white and a darker palette referencing the mythical black swan. "A strong and rare occurrence... it never passes unnoticed," Albertini says of the creature. "Same with our wallpapers. They have the power of beauty and the grace of nature." aesthetiqueatelier.com
